Notes from the Executive Director

HAF Welcomes New Board Members

HAF continues to strengthen its board with the addition of four new and enthusiastic members.

Please welcome George Battistel, associate vice president for finance at Lewis and Clark College; Julie Hedges, owner of Kanshoh Tree Preservation; Gisel Hillner, vice president for the Oregon region, commercial banking at Washington Trust Bank; and Elisabeth Shellan, tax attorney at Stoel Rives LLP.

Collectively, they bring skills and experience in finance, horticulture and marketing to keep HAF moving forward. Our deepest thanks to past board members Colleen Foley Sacks, Colleen Lockovitch and Dane Tudhope-Locklear for their many hours of hard work and dedication. We are often in need of volunteers to serve on our board committees; if you, or someone you know, believe in the mission of Hoyt Arboretum and have experience in fundraising, event planning, marketing, board development or donor relations, please contact me.

Strategic Planning Begins

Oregon Organization Development Network has generously offered their pro-bono services to HAF to develop a strategic plan and board development process. A team of three consultants will lead the HAF board and staff through the process of revisiting our mission, vision, values, goals and strategies that will guide us for the next three to five years. We are strengthening our organization by planning for the future and creating the tools to continue to improve Hoyt Arboretum and HAF so they continue to be a vital and well-supported destination for Portlanders and our visitors.

When Will They Bloom?

Plums and Cherries are just beginning to bloom. Their fragile blooms require calm weather for peak viewing now through the end of April.

Dogwoods are a staple in Oregon. These beauties can be seen blooming near the Vietnam Veteran's Memorial beginning in mid-May.

Month

April

Maples will begin to unfurl their long flower chains in late-April. These are stunning intricate blooms that are often overlooked.

May

Magnolias begin blooming as early as mid-April with M. stellata and will last until the end of May. The peak bloom time should be early May.

Spring Blooms Abound The signs of spring are upon us and rumors of magnolia blooms abound. Many visitors are asking about the status of the Hoyt Magnolia collection and when the peak viewing time will be. The first of our magnolias to bloom and a common sight around Portland is the small tree form of Magnolia stellata, Star Magnolia.

Magnolia stellata, at the Hoyt Arboretum

M. stellata has been in cultivation for hundreds of years in Japan and was first introduced in the US in 1861 by George Hall. Today, there are about 8 common cultivars, though 20 or more exist. Most often seen is Royal Star, an early, profusely blooming white tepaled (petaled) selection.

Common cultivars are 'Jane Platt', 'Rubra', 'Waterlily', 'Rosea', 'Centennial', 'Pink Stardust', and 'Chrysanthemiflora.' Additional cultivars exist but are often not significantly different from this group. Grown for its early bloom time, this Magnolia is a reliable and exuberant bloomer in good moist soil. A sunny location will increase bloom and summer water is important for all magnolias. Bloom color on some cultivars is more pink and tepal numbers can range from 12 to 32 in a single flower. In all cases, this is a small finely branched tree reaching about 15 feet in height.

Though the cultivars of this magnolia are plentiful and common, the species itself has been given the endangered status of "vulnerable" on the Botanic Garden Conservation International Red List. Native to Japan, the population is scattered and under threat from land development and illegal collection. Ex situ conservation practices (off-site conservation) carried out at Hoyt Arboretum and other public gardens will ensure this species is protected. Hoyt Arboretum's Magnolia collection is nationally recognized as part of the North American Plant Collections Consortium's multi site Magnolia collection. Come and see the Magnolia stellata species and cultivars today!
